

This diagram shows the central elements commonly found in most workforce planning models.

Workforce planning is not a stand-alone process or system. An effective approach must be incorporated with business practices; incorporate an analysis of current and possible future operating contexts; and include ongoing monitoring of the environment, workforce issues and organisational strategies.

Source: Australian Public Service Commission
<http://www.apsc.gov.au/publications06/workforceplanning.pdf>